

Rensselaer, SJC Facing Energy Crisis

Communities across the nation are feeling the initial pinch of the growing "energy crisis," and Rensselaer is no exception. The town is experiencing the worst fuel crisis in its history and because of this, electric power may not be available to its residents and to Saint Joseph's College.

The Student Life Committee met Wednesday night to discuss in what areas the college could curtail the use of electricity to aid the town, and prevent an electricity shortage on campus.

The citizens of Rensselaer have already taken steps to conserve the city's diminishing supply of diesel fuel. Mayor Emmett Eger ordered a blackout of street lights. Lowering of thermostats and a four-day, ten-hour week for industries and schools have also been suggested.

Rensselaer's allocation of diesel fuel is controlled by the federal Office of Oil and Gas in Chicago. The city's November allotment is 36,000 gallons, compared to the 140,000 gallons consumed by the community in the month of October.

Rensselaer's depleted fuel supply necessitates a 15-20 percent reduction of electricity on the part of Saint Joe's. The college receives the largest share of the town's fuel.

Fr. Paul R. White, vice-president of the college, spoke to students Thursday, during the various Core lecture assemblies, informing them of the immediacy of the energy crisis, and what conservation action the college intended to take to alleviate the situation. He emphasized that curtailment of electricity would be done only in those areas where the light was expendable, so as not to disrupt the normal activities of the students.

Curtailment was suggested for the following areas:

1. Blackout all exterior lights that are not essential in terms of campus security and safety, i.e. some parking lots, the grotto after a certain hour.
2. The plumbing and electrical offices will be moved from the campus farms to the janitorial building on campus to eliminate the use of electricity in outlying areas.
3. Raleigh Hall to be locked after 10 p.m.

4. Close the laundromat after 8 p.m.

5. Curtail the use of the science building at night.

6. Close the upper floors of Halleck Center, from the cafeteria to the third floor after 7 p.m. The snack bar would remain open until 11 p.m. Meetings and social events scheduled for Halleck Center would still take place, possibly at an earlier hour.

Lonnie and Lugnutz will revive some '50's moldie-olies at the campus hops during Greaser Weekend, Nov. 30-Dec. 1.

SJC Senate Approves Proposal On Ouster Of President Nixon

Discussion on the movie, "Fritz the Cat," and possible food fights, along with a proposal on the resignation or impeachment of President Nixon, and approval of the Biology Club constitution highlighted last Tuesday's Senate meeting.

The Senate passed a motion which stated, "Fritz the Cat," would not be shown, and all possible X-rated movies would be cancelled. The proposal was prompted by Fr. Banet's policy that no X-rated movies would be shown on campus, as of Mar. 3, 1973.

It was brought to the attention of the Senate that possible food fights could lead to a reduction in the students' menu. The SA Food Committee said that no formal complaints have been issued to them, therefore no action has been taken about recent food quality.

A proposal by Tom O'Donnell (sr.-Drx.) on the resignation or impeachment of President Nixon was passed by the Senate and sent to Speaker of U.S. House of Representatives, Carl Albert. The proposal reads as follows:

"We, the Student Senate of Saint Joseph's College, strongly believe that impeachment proceedings concerning the superior executive authority, the President, Mr. Nixon, be approached with extreme caution and definite direction. We applaud this action of the House and sincerely hope that this action of impeachment be carried out to its fullest."

The Senate accepted the constitution of the Biology Club. The club's purpose is to afford its members the basic facilities for the exercise of their studies in biology.

Revamped Guidance Plan Stresses Personal Touch

In order to provide more extensive counseling and guidance services for Saint Joseph's College students, the Guidance Clinic is now undergoing a total revamping, according to Dr. James Kenny, Director of Guidance. Besides coordinating the various guidance services, the new system is intended to make the guidance function more responsive to the students by making it more readily available to them on a personal basis.

The main thrust of the reorganizational efforts is to bring academic and vocational counseling to the students through their major academic departments. Each department chairperson will have the responsibility of assigning counselors to departmental majors, advising students who are experiencing academic difficulty, and keeping students informed on current job-placement opportunities. Department chairpersons will have several channels of guidance at their disposal to facilitate the enactment of these duties.

First, the Guidance Clinic will compile "trouble lists" every semester after grades are out, providing the name, grade point indices, SAT scores, etc., of students experiencing academic difficulty. At present, "trouble" signs which would make a student eligible for a "trouble list" include a cumulative index below 2.00, a semester index below 1.80, or a drop of .50 or more from the previous semester's grade point index. Upon receiving such notification about a student in his department, the chairperson will assist the student and notify the Guidance Clinic as to what has been done about the problem. Hopefully, "trouble lists" will make a problem student aware of his situation and prevent the need for academic probation.

In addition to counseling from an academic advisor, students inquiring into graduate studies will have available to them catalogues from every graduate school in the U.S. These catalogues will be provided to students through the Guidance Clinic.

Working with the Placement Office, the Guidance Clinic will supply the chairpersons with job and career information for use in counseling juniors and seniors. Hopefully Saint Joseph's alumni can help in placing graduates or can suggest suitable job openings for graduates.

The delegation of these guidance responsibilities to the individual departments is intended to make academic guidance a more immediate part of the students' educational experience.

Brick Fund Nets $1,100 In Raffle

By PAUL MISNIAK

There are several winners in the raffle for the Norton 750 motorcycle conducted by the Student Association during Homecoming. Jan Köcher (soph.-Jus.) won the motorcycle. Another winner was the building fund, which has realized a $1,100 addition to its account. The money has already been transferred to the fund, and will aid in future rebuilding. The members of the student body who purchased the chances also won, as they will ultimately reap the benefits as the money supports the revitalization of the campus.

Special appreciation is extended to William Burns, father of senior Pat Burns, who donated the motorcycle. Without his cooperation, the success of the raffle would have been impossible.

Flick The Switch!

The city of Rensselaer, and consequently, Saint Joseph's College, are experiencing a very real energy crisis at this time. Fuel oil and electricity are at a premium and energy conservation at the individual level is imperative if we are to more efficiently utilize our existing resources. Consciously limiting ourselves in the use of electricity may sometimes prove to be an inconvenience, but we hope that all members of the community will co-operate during the crisis and support efforts to conserve energy for the mutual benefit of town and college.

Be Professional

Fr. Robbins' item in a recent bulletin concerning Mike Ledvina's tardy submission of freshmen mid-term grades was highly unnecessary and unprofessional.

The public chastisement of Ledvina served no other purpose than to embarrass the individual professor, and to infuriate those students who recognized the pettiness of Fr. Robbins' action.

In our opinion, the fulfillment of obligations of this nature, or the failure to do so is primarily a private concern between the administrator and faculty member, as are the obligations between a faculty member and a student. Professional courtesy dictates that these matters should be handled between those individuals directly concerned.

Fr. Robbins exhibited a lack of consideration and respect by publicizing a matter that should have been settled privately.

Board Meeting

Woollen Associates have completed tentative plans for building and renovating SJC's campus. They are scheduled to present these plans before the Board of Trustees at the Nov. 30 meeting in Chicago.

It would be practical and imperative, we feel, to hold that meeting on campus. This would afford the board members an opportunity to view the campus and its present conditions in light of the architects' new proposals.

We do not feel that Mr. Schreiber, board chairman, and other members of the board should depend wholly on the conveyance of conditions by the administration.

What is decided at this meeting affects the present Collegeville community and future alumni.

We strongly urge the Board of Trustees to convene on Puma soil.

CAMPUS FORUM

X-Rated Movie Policy Questioned

The recent controversy over censorship of X-rated movies on campus has presented the student body with a very serious problem. This consists of a major discrepancy concerning the authority over matters of student entertainment and the subsequent naive belief that the students and student government have any power in checking the management of the institution.

Last Friday's meeting with Fr. Banet and a select senate committee illustrated the weakness of the credibility of student government. At this meeting, Fr. Banet chose to display a totally uncompromising attitude toward the possibility of showing any future X-rated films and thus fostered an air of futility among several concerned students on campus.

By threatening the very existence of the movie committee if further discussion continues regarding X-rated films, our president has relentlessly confirmed that he is the final and absolute authority on campus. In light of these events, therefore, the students of Saint Joseph's College must confront themselves with the question: Is Saint Joe's "people" as our catalogue states, or is it Fr. Banet?

Clearly, when a college president takes it upon himself to determine the moral code of a campus and resorts to threats as a means of enforcing this code, one cannot help but wonder if the age of autocrats has ever left us. What now should concern the students on campus, however, is not the reasons for showing any particular X-rated film, but rather the fact that Fr. Banet explicitly forbade the student government to continue any further debate with him on the showing of any X-rated films.

Architects Formulating Plans

Now is a good time to describe the progress of Evans Woollen Associates, the architectural firm presently employed by the college to present a redevelopment program. The plan is not definite and may change many times before a final decision is made.

The specifics of the plan are presently being discussed by the Development Committee. A firm-ed-up plan leading to direct redevelopment will hopefully be ready for presentation to the Board of Trustees at its Nov. 30 meeting.

There are so many possibilities that have been and will be considered that to give each proposal would only cause confusion. The general plan, however, should be mentioned. Because we do not know how much money we will have to spend, and because we won't know for years, the plan is being presented in phases.

Phase I, scheduled to start next year, would provide academic space, dorm renovation, faculty offices, and a more permanent place for the administration. Academic space would be in at least Science Hall and Halleck Center. Faculty offices would be located nearer to classrooms. And the administration would be given a definite location.

Phase II, proposed to begin in 1976, would further renovate dorms, improve academic facilities, and upgrade the athletic buildings. Also in Phase II are campus roads and walks which would improve campus circulation. The general idea would be to make the middle of campus all pedestrian, eliminating the present danger of cars which now use the same pavement on which we walk.

Phase III, to begin shortly after Phase II, would conclude the Woollen plan. It includes remodeling of the Schwieterman lounges, a re-evaluation of Dwenger Hall, and an effort to make the area south of the post office more useable.

By no means are any of the things here complete or definite. Nor will they necessarily come in the order they have been described. Specifics have been avoided because no definite decisions have been made to affirm any specifics. It is important that we now know the basic idea of Woollen Associates.

At last Tuesday's meeting, the Development Committee decided to accept the basic philosophy of Woollen as it pertains to our redevelopment. We must use as much of our present space as possible and avoid building any new and expensive buildings unless they are needed. With this approach we will probably have few or no new buildings. This approach seems to be the most creative and economical. Woollen has examined every inch of the campus and is trying to use this space to our advantage.

Hours of discussion remain for the Development Committee and the Board of Trustees. The outcome of these discussions will be a redevelopment plan showing educated and professional decisions.

Letters To The Editors

Dear Editor:

Fr. Banet's recent action, concerning X-rated movies, is inexcusable. I grant that his moral direction, most likely, lies in a different sphere than my own. Due to this fact, arguments concerning moralities are regrettably meaningless.

Yet, the authoritarian and narrow-minded manner exhibited, in reaching the above decision, was one fit for a high school principal rather than a college president. His threat towards a certain member of the movie committee had no rational purpose. "But thus it is to incur the enmity of a King."

Well Fr. Banet, I will give you the benefit of the doubt and say your emotions could not be checked. But Father, I cannot excuse your hypocrisy. Yes, a very strong word indeed. Yet when viewed alongside the aims and purposes of Saint Joseph's College, as stated in our esteemed catalogue, its significance is felt. "Saint Joseph's College is an independent institution of higher learning dedicated to being a community of scholars—teachers and students—working in mutual association under the leadership and direction of its teachers, towards the spread, preservation, clarification, discovery and defense of truth. Whether the truths of the sciences, arts and skills be viewed as revealed or acquired, as speculative or practical, as moral or artistic, the dedication to these truths and the search for them is the primary purpose of Saint Joseph's."

There are many other quotes in the catalogue and they all deal with the concept of truth through education. There are many facets of education, as there are many facets of life. Yet education is the mirror by which we view life. Cloud the mirror and you lose sight of the truth.

Fr. Banet, the model of the educator at Saint Joseph's College? I cannot accept the premise that truth and hypocrisy are companions-at-arms.

Phil Simon

Senior - Bennett

Dear Editor:

I feel that it is time for the students and faculty of Saint Joseph's College to review the reasons for the existence of this institution of higher learning. It is important that we re-evaluate the aims, objectives, and goals of Saint Joseph's College.

Since my arrival on this campus late in August, I have heard nothing but a continuing list of "problems" for students to complain about. First, it is usually the food which is a perennial favorite. Now, it is the maintenance problem. This institution thrives in a constant mood of complaints. Even though the meatless Wednesday has been cancelled for a while, I do not understand why and how the meatless Wednesday proposal was passed by the Student Senate without the general approval of the entire student body. It appeared to be rush legislation by the Student Senate. Many students did not know about the proposal until the first meatless Wednesday.

With respect to maintenance, if worse comes to worse, the Senate will ultimately get the parents involved in the situation. What can "Daddy" and "Mommy" effectively do that the student cannot? The way things are going, the SJC Puma will, no doubt, soon be demanding private maids for each room and chauffeured limousines for a quick trip to Rensselaer.

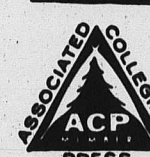

The four essential topics of importance on any college campus seem to be social events, academic education, food, and maintenance. Academic education seems to be forced to the last priority for many individuals. I would be the first to agree that the other aspects of college life are positively important, but the

Merlini Captures IM Football Title

By SUE REILLY

Merlini Hall claims the IM football championship, as the Lonely Hearts Club defeated East Seifert Rat Pack, 20-8, Oct. 29. The victory snapped a 30-game win streak by East Seifert and took the title away from the East Seifert team for the first time in three years.

Merlini took the game to the Rat Pack right from the start, scoring on their first possession of the game. The extra point attempt was short. The Lonely Hearts scored again before the half to move ahead, 12-0.

East Seifert moved back into striking range, with a touchdown to open up the second half, but Merlini countered with a touchdown to up the score to 18-6. The two teams exchanged safeties in the last two minutes to conclude the scoring.

The Powder Puff football confrontation between the current

WRA champions and an alumni team was held Nov. 3 during Parents' Weekend. This year's champions, represented by the Italian Stallions, a sophomore team captained by Debbie Moran and coached by Jim Burns and Fred Mariani, met the alumni behind Noll Hall. Playing before an enthusiastic crowd, the undergrads convincingly defeated the alumni, 20-0. The scoring was provided by touchdowns made by Moran, Beth Zinser and Nancy McAtee. Roxanne Goebel scored the extra points.

WRA volleyball competition began Nov. 1. There are ten teams participating in round-robin play. Early leaders include the Say Heys (jr.) captained by Jan Bottorff, the Spiffy Spikers (fr.-Carol Smith, captain), and the Slaughter House Six (sr.-Marianne Hollern, captain). The games are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Pumas Looking For IBC Charity After 38-7 Drubbing By Valpo

Saint Joseph's closes out its 1973 football season Sunday, when the Pumas tackle the Eagles of Illinois Benedictine College at Gilroy Stadium in Gary at 1 p.m.

The game, the third annual Catholic Charities game for the Diocese of Gary, pits two clubs whose records are identically opposite, as Benedictine stands 7-2 while Saint Joe is 2-7. Both teams had one common foe on their 1973 schedules. Illinois Benedictine defeated Wayne State, 26-14, while the Pumas suffered a 21-13 loss to the Tartars Sept. 22.

Saint Joe has won both charity contests, defeating Benedictine in 1971 by a 24-21 count, then trouncing the Eagles last year at Hammond, 47-25.

Benedictine features a top-flight wishbone offense, led by halfback Ken Carruthers. The 5-11, 175-pound sophomore stands ninth in the nation in rushing, totaling 1192 yards in nine games. He also is the leading pass receiver, with 26 catches for 387 yards. Carruthers has ten touchdowns on the season.

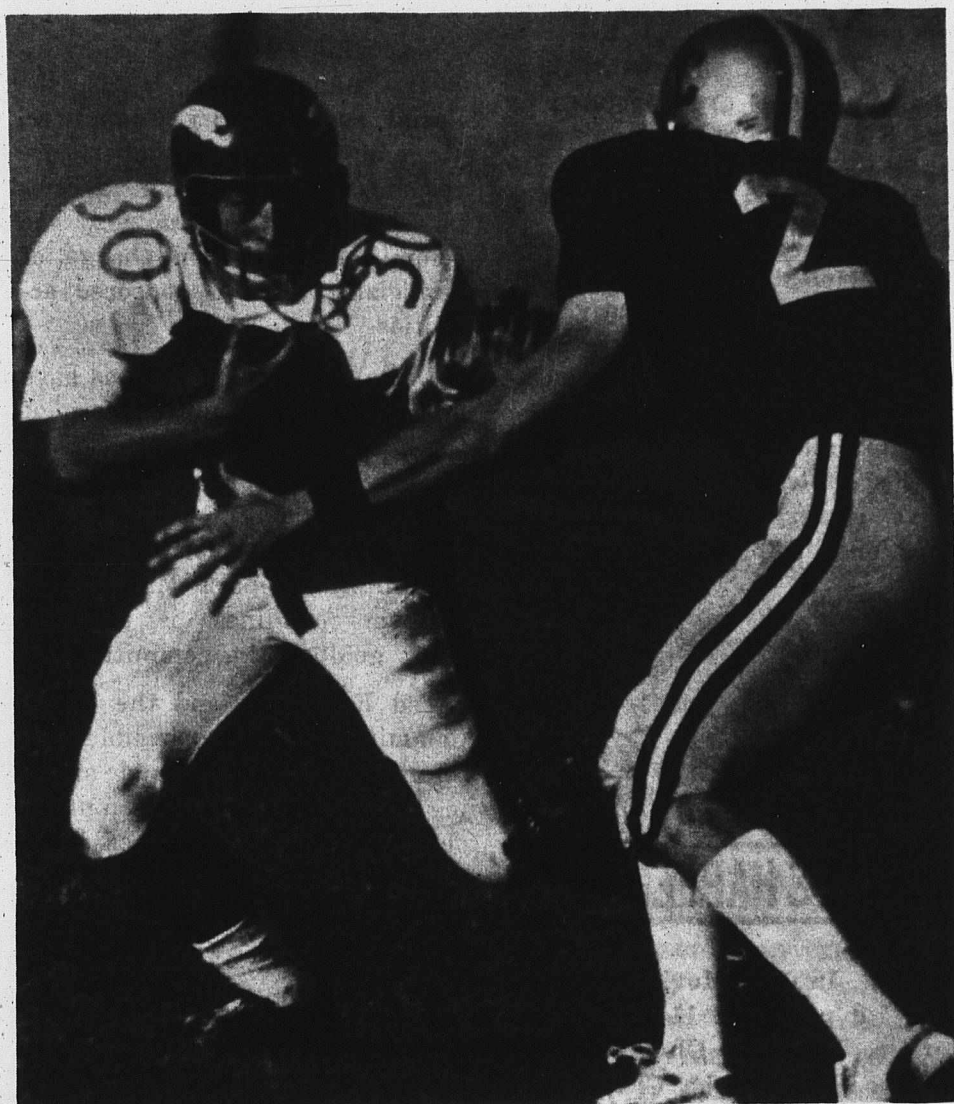

Directing the attack for the Eagles is junior Tom McGuire. The 6-1, 180-pound quarterback has missed two games, yet has completed 73 of 126 passes for 1067 yards and nine touchdowns.

On defense, Benedictine is led by all-American candidate Mike Rogowski. The 6-3, 220-pound middle linebacker may seem to be in on every play, as the senior from Chicago has broken defensive records for coach Tom

Saint Joseph's comes into the contest in an uncharitable mood, especially after last week's showing at Valparaiso. Saint Joe suffered their worst defeat of the season in the 38-7 showing.

Wide receiver Joe Pallotta tries to elude an Indiana Central defender after snaring one of his two receptions during the 16-14 upset of the Greyhounds by Saint Joe Nov. 3. Pallotta broke the single-season pass reception mark with six catches against Valparaiso, and takes 43 receptions into Sunday's battle against Illinois Benedictine.

Women's P.E. Major? Not Yet

by Robin Hartman

My, how times have changed!

Two years ago, in the midst of simmering troubles over athletics and the overall physical education program here, there was an effort to scrap the men's physical education major.

Now, in 1973, the tables are turned. Not only is there a call to continue the major, but to expand the major to co-eds.

Sensible? Yes, because in this age of women's libbers and equal opportunity for all, there should be no reason why one group is excluded from studying in the field of his/her choice, whether it be in business, computer science or physical education.

Practical? Yes, especially when one takes into consideration the fact that co-education here is rapidly achieving a 50-50 balance. Fortunately, (or unfortunately, depending on one's view), co-education is here to stay.

Probable? No, at least not yet.

The reasons why the roses and sunshine about women's p.e. stops here are major, and are all tied to something no college can survive without: money.

EXPANDING WHILE BALANCING THE BUDGET

This proposal, while needed, goes into the face of a ten percent budget cut, which affects all departments. This would affect the program in that needed equipment and facilities would not be available to women, simply because there is no money to work with, other than that already allotted. For example, desperately-needed upgrading of dressing room facilities for women would be needed before any action could be taken on a major, but there is little or no money available to do the job right. Needed equipment for gymnastics classes and upgrading of the tennis courts are two other important necessities that are needed immediately before a women's p.e. major can be implemented effectively.

DEPARTMENT ALREADY OVERLOADED

Finally, but most importantly, to run the major, the department has to have teachers. The current department instructors are already at the point of no return now, not only with classes but with coaching as well, since every member of the department has another job after class as a coach or administrator. One, perhaps two new teachers will be needed to teach the additional courses which would emerge with additional students in the department, and that, unless the administration has been telling fibs, is going to take money which the school doesn't have.

The department, along with the SA Academic Affairs Board, are working on plans to implement the possible program. Most likely the women's p.e. major will not be implemented next semester or next year, but the planning now will be valuable in the future.

Is women's p.e. sensible? Yes. Is it practical? Yes. Is it probable?

Not yet, but watch for it in the future.

Mingey Tackles Coaching Challenge

It has become axiomatic in college and professional football that championship teams must have great defense. At Saint Joseph's College, the task of fashioning a top-flight point prevention unit falls to Tim Mingey, a 1972 SJC alumnus who was himself a top defender on the rugged unit that paced the Pumas to the '71 Indiana Collegiate Conference title.

"This is an unbelievable challenge, a really great opportunity," he points out. "Head coach Bill Jennings has given me a terrific responsibility, and I'm trying to do the best I can. We have many underclassmen on our defense and we're going to make mistakes, but we'll just have to make immediate corrections and learn together."

You couldn't hand deliver a job more in keeping with Mingey's intended profession. "I want to go into coaching; as a player, I concentrated mostly on football, and naturally this would be my preference now, but I feel I would enjoy coaching any sport."

Mingey's search for accreditation as a teacher brought him back to Saint Joseph's. Recipient of a bachelor of science degree in physical education from Collegeville in May of 1972, he taught social studies and coached freshman football and junior varsity baseball at Bishop Noll High School in Hammond, Ind., during 1972-73.

"In order to get my teacher certification, I had to complete a semester of student teaching," Mingey explains. "That's what I'm doing here at Saint Joe this semester. I'll be looking for full-time coaching work when I leave here next January."

Wherever he goes, Mingey's experience at Saint Joseph's should prove valuable. He views his relative youth as more of an advantage than a disadvantage. "I do not have the experience that an older coach would have, but I feel I may be able to relate better to young players now; I know what affected me as a player and this should help me in understanding my players."

Player motivation is a major concern for this 1968 St. Rita High School (Chicago) alumnus who starred as a defensive end and linebacker for SJC despite his 5-9, 170-pound size. Former Saint Joe coach Ernie Fritsch often said that Mingey's motivation made him five inches taller and 50 pounds heavier.

His goal with the young Puma defense is to build for the future by working to improve fundamentals. "It's a thrilling experience to see a team execute properly some of the things you try to teach them. In this sense, coaching becomes something very creative, like a work of art."

Mingey also believes in being positive. "In working with a young team, I try to tell everyone 'good job' when they've done well, and I try to be constructive and not overly critical when pointing out mistakes."

As for his overall coaching philosophy, he says "you can be a very smart football technician, but you still have to relate well to your players. A truly great coach will improve his players both as players and men."

Defensive coach Tim Mingey explains defensive strategy to a player during the Indiana Central game. Mingey takes the assignment as the youngest defensive coach in conference history.

SA Committees Involve Students, Delegate Social, Academic Duties

The Student Association Standing Committees were initiated to make the SA more effective in its student, faculty and administrative affairs. Committee members are chosen from the applications submitted by individual students, and chairmen of the committees are appointed by the SA President, and approved by the Senate.

The Academic Affairs Board, headed by Dorothy Colgan, concerns itself with the curriculum and instruction. Presently the committee is attempting to initiate a women's physical education major. The Core program is also under intensive study.

The Athletic Committee, with Dave Huneryager as chairman, functions in promoting a well-rounded program of sports and recreation for the student body. They are responsible for the activities of the SA which are related to the college athletic program.

Gary Lupa, as SA Vice-President, automatically heads the Social and Publicity Committee. He and the other members are responsible for planning all campus events, except movies. The committee is also in charge of publicizing all SA-sponsored activities.

Dorm janitorial conditions have lately been the main concern of the Maintenance Committee. Tom Backofen, as chairman, is conducting frequent inspections of every dorm, and submits a weekly janitorial report. Maintaining uniform cleanliness is the primary goal of the committee.

Ted Karpovich and the Movie Committee are responsible for selecting, scheduling and showing all films. They attempt to obtain a variety of movies so as to provide something which appeals to everyone.

The Food Committee and chairman Tom O'Donnell meet with Max Morpheu of ARA to maintain and improve food and service. Meatless Wednesdays, originated by the committee because of high meat costs, have been discontinued due to the stabilization of prices. The committee also voices student suggestions to the food service.

The Liturgy Committee is responsible for planning and carrying out campus liturgical events. Besides preparing Masses, Deb Wolke and other members are arranging a retreat scheduled for early December. In addition, they are in charge of the penance services.

Patty Ellis and the Committee to Promote Campus Environmental Concern have been busy painting garbage cans and fire hydrants. Their main objective is aimed at improving the appearance of the campus by making the students aware that janitorial and maintenance are not solely responsible for campus and dorm conditions.

The Admissions Committee is taking a personal approach this year in recruiting new students. Melanie Murtaugh, as chairperson, is having members of various majors send individual, handwritten letters to prospective students.

Ray McDonald and the Little 500 Committee are preparing for the Little 500 go-kart race to be held Apr. 20. They are sending letters asking various companies to send materials which would be helpful in promoting the race.

question is how important. When will the SJC students begin to evaluate themselves and their actions?

Let's get back to an atmosphere of education and growth as a human being, not the seeking for problems to raise tempers that create an atmosphere of animosity. No doubt, many will feel this is quite controversial, but I feel that I have to put my ideas in writing instead of just watching the events happen. Maybe Michael Novak in the Core 9 syllabus was correct when he said that God "will come back to the colleges, when man comes back."

A Concerned Student

Dear Editor:

This letter concerns the very pointless, and unchristian remark made about Michael Ledvina, by Fr. Robbins in one daily bulletin. How can we call this college a place of Christian brotherhood, when the administration and the faculty are at each other's throats? How can a professor demand any kind of respect from his students when a member of the administration humiliates him in front of the whole student body?

I know I'm not one to judge, but I don't think Fr. Robbins had the right to make that kind of judgement either. Next time, when personal complaints arise, exercise the common courtesy to take it up with the man yourself instead of disgracing him publicly. I am withholding my name for fear of further repercussions.

Disgusted Student

Dear Editor:

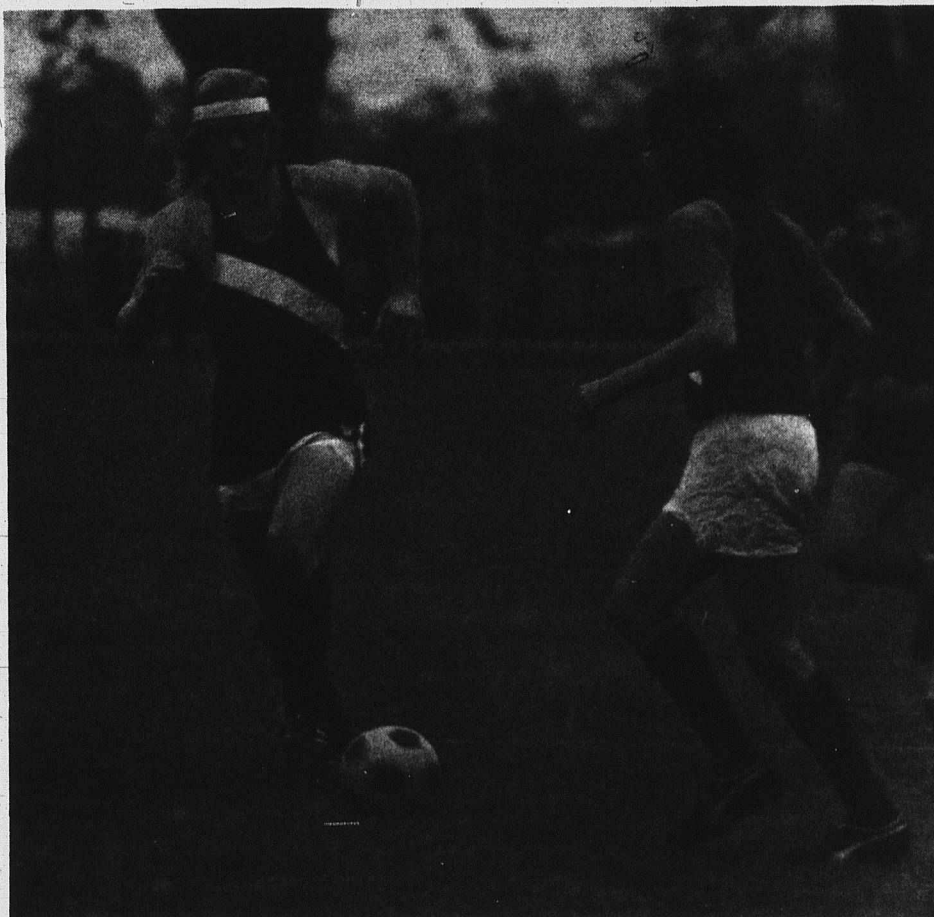

Being college students and members of a community it is necessary for each student to carry some responsibility. This past weekend, it became evident that many of the girls on second west Justin are not aware of what responsibility means. They thought only of themselves and not only put aside their own privilege, but also infringed upon the rights of the rest of the girls on the west wing.

Due to the irresponsibility of these girls, the entire west wing was without open house for the evening hours of the weekend. We feel that these girls should be penalized for not taking their turn. This situation should be dealt with as soon as possible to prevent future reoccurrences.

Rick Nieberding makes his offensive move, while being attacked by a Valpo defender, in the team's last game of the fall season.

The assumption of academic-vocational counseling by the individual departments will better enable the Guidance Clinic to expand its personal and psychological counseling services. In the newly-created position of Executive Secretary of Guidance, Mrs. Gertrude Hentschel will be given more complex responsibilities in practical guidance. Lawrence Lennon will become the Clinical Psychologist and will later assume the additional duties of the Director of Guidance.

Dr. Kenny comments, "I prefer to call it a guidance function instead of a guidance department." He expresses hope that students will more fully seek out and utilize the expanded guidance services available to them.

As a result, Fr. Banet's challenge to the Student Senate last Friday has created a crisis situation. A tactless and undiplomatic college administrator leaves little room for those under him to respond without suffering severe consequences. Yet an elected Student Senate cannot exist unless it lives up to the mandate afforded it by the student body.

It now becomes the responsibility of every student to voice his opinion to his senator about this issue. If the Student Senate is to act, then it must act from a position of power. If it cannot do this, then student government at Saint Joseph's College becomes nothing more than a myth.

$165 Collected For Red Cross

The Red Cross collection drive, conducted by the Phi Kappa Fraternity, has been highly successful. The $165 plus expected to be collected by today far exceeds the projected goals of the drive.

The Phi Kappas, consisting of 23 fraternity brothers and six "little sisters," became involved when approached by Jim Hoover, director of fund raising for the Jasper County Red Cross. He enlisted their help, and the drive has enjoyed more success than anyone expected when it began on Oct. 27.
